The Media and Reporting

The media's public proclamations lead me to the conclusion: they are not interested in reporting facts. As a Private Investigative Agency D&A Investigations, Inc. will not disclose the identity of our Clients or communicate the details of any Case. We do not answer to the whims of the media, nor do we answer to a publicity hound outside interloper who has demonstrated no interest in looking for the truth before making loud uninformed noises.

While the media's public outcries are colorful, there are several instances where they have inserted themselves into other people's affairs with limited or, no knowledge of the facts. Most earnest people want to learn by their mistakes. The media appears to glory in repeating them.

Don't make the same mistake made by the many who post what they believe to be accurate information on the internet. They and others for the most part, rely on media reports that are replete with inaccuracies. The media will continue with its assertions towards D&A, its Clients, myself and others, stomp their feet up and down and report inaccuracies -- that is a hallmark of democracy -- but they will not stop D&A nor slow us down for one second, from doing what is right, remaining focused on the Case, seeking the facts and protecting our Clients confidentiality.
